Section C
[25 marks]

Questions 26 - 31 are based on the following passage.

- 1 In 2009, The China Giant Panda Protection and Research Center signed an agreement for a three-year panda conservation plan with automobile giant Mercedes-Benz China. The company pledged to help improve the living conditions of baby pandas through its Green Legacy programme, a specialized fund for nature conservation it had launched in 2007. Xing Hui is the first baby panda resident of the nursery this year. The panda nursery is located next to the “Panda Kindergarten,” both of which belong to the Mercedes-Benz Giant Panda Theme Park. This panda will spend half of its first six months in a nursery, after which it will begin schooling at the kindergarten with other baby pandas of the same age group. 5 10
- 2 Human caregivers look after the baby pandas from the time they are born through adolescence. Interestingly, there are more male than female caregivers here, with four “daddies” and two “mummies” divvying up the responsibilities of taking care of the young. The main task of these nannies is to be there with the young pandas through their mealtimes, playtime – even during the toilet breaks. 15
- 3 At about seven a.m., Xing Hui takes his first sip of milk, much to Li Guo’s relief. He is the chief of the nursery. The first feeding is typically the toughest. While baby pandas are equipped with the natural ability to locate and feed from their mother’s nipples, things are not as simple with foster breeding. First, the caregiver has to carefully wrap the baby pandas little body with the cotton gauze patch folded thrice over with one hand, so that its tiny head is exposed. Using the other hand, the nanny has to hold a 50-millilitre cylindrical milk bottle and either gently touch the baby panda’s mouth with the bottle teat, or squeeze the bottle to smear some milk on its lips. Hopefully, the milky flavour will arouse its sense of smell, enticing its tiny mouth to open. 20 25
- 4 “The baby panda has no idea what you are doing, nor does it know what a bottle teat is. It won’t open its mouth instinctively. In this case, it is important that the hand holding the baby panda stimulates a mother’s embrace, so that it feels comfortable and safe. If it gets too nervous or frightened, it won’t feed,” Li Guo recalls. 30
- 5 Li Guo is a senior “daddy” in the nursery. There are times when he has to take care of six baby pandas all by himself every night. Often, when one is feeding, another will become restless. Super-Daddy Li will then have to multitask, hugging one while petting the other. By the time he is done feeding all six babies, it will often already be dawn. 35
- 6 Thankfully, Xing Hui is a good baby, saving his caregivers a lot of trouble. Where it comes to the more fussy ones, however, feeding can be challenging enough to drive anyone mad. There have been times when Li 40

Guo has had to try feeding a newborn baby panda over and over again. If A single gramme of milk gets cold, he has to warm it up repeatedly, and the baby’s tiny mouth moistened with a small cotton ball dipped in purified water every so often. It could be a whole night of pottering about before the baby panda would finally feed for the first time. 45

7 “The key to breeding pandas is to be careful, patience and loving,” says caregiver Zhang Ya-hui, a Shaanxi native who transferred here two years ago. Prior to coming to the conservation center, he had done jobs such as field monitoring, habitat surveying, and wilderness training as part of the Scientific Research Department. From the rough-and-tumble nature of fieldwork to the gentleness and meticulousness necessitated by nannying the pandas, Zhang recalls how drastic and difficult the transformation had been: he was particularly trembling the first time he held a tiny baby panda, which weighted only as much as two eggs in his hands. 50 55

8 These young caregivers are not only protecting the baby pandas, but are also protecting their own dreams. Despite the tribulations that are part and parcel of their work at the center, they continue to stand proudly by what they do: playing their part in ensuring the continued survival of the giant panda. 60

Question 32

Read the poem 'He Had Such Quiet Eyes' below and answer the questions that follow.

He Had Such Quiet Eyes

*He had such quiet eyes
She did not realise
They were two pools of lies
Layered with thinnest ice
To her, those quiet eyes
Were breathing desolate sighs
Imploring her to be nice
And to render him paradise*

*If only she'd been wise
And had listened to the advice
Never to compromise
With pleasure-seeking guys
She'd be free from "the hows and whys"
Now here's a bit of advice
Be sure that nice really means nice
Then you'll never be losing at dice
Though you may lose your heart once or twice.*

Question 33

Read the following extract from the short story The Fruitcake Special by Frank Brennan and answer the questions that follow.

It was the perfume, my fruitcake special again. The waiter had a good smell of it when he had passed by earlier and now he thought he was in love with me, the poor man.

It wasn't his fault. I told him that if he loved me he would not talk loudly about it.

"Of course, my love. I will not embarrass you...darling!" the waiter said. So far I'd two men call me darling in one evening. Aunt Mimi would be pleased.

33 (a) Where did the incident above happen?

_____ [1 mark]

(b) Who does "the poor man" refer to?
