Questions 9 – 15 are based on the following passage.

We all tell lies at some point in our lives. Young children are unable to tell lies. But as we get older, we understand the difference ___9___ truth and deception. Most of us tell “white lies”. A white lie is an untruth we tell to avoid hurting other people’s feelings. Experts tell us that ___10___ is an unavoidable part of human nature.

The first sign of a lie is that the person ___11___ is lying needs to justify the lie by giving you more and more reasons to believe what he is saying. A recent study shows that lying is equally difficult for the body as a whole. Our bodies work ___12___ when we try to tell a lie.

___13___, we speak more fluently when we are lying. This is partly because we rehearse our lies to be sure that they sound convincing. Equally, when we write a lie, we make sure we persuade ___14___ reader that we are telling the truth. Happily, for those of us who ___15___ a simple life, telling the truth ends up being less stressful in the end for everyone.

Questions 26 – 31 are based on the following passage.

The passage below describes how Maja, who lost her legs, finds inspiration from a disabled dolphin. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

- 1 After losing her leg in a brutal war, 16-year-old Maja thought she would never walk without pain again. Then she saw a dolphin with an artificial tail which changed her life.
- 2 In high school, she planned to become a professional athlete. Then in 1993, during the Bosnian civil war, a grenade exploded in the compound of her building. The six friends she had been chatting with were killed. Her left arm and both legs were badly injured. At the hospital, her left leg was deemed beyond repair and amputated just below the knee. "There was no anaesthesia," she recalls. "They tied me down and put a piece of rubber in my mouth to bite on. I could feel everything." Her leg wound became infected. Without antibiotics, she drifted in and out of consciousness. For weeks, her parents kept vigil by her bed. A British activist, Sally Becker, arranged to bring Maja to the United States for treatment. 5
- 3 Maja spent nearly two years in a hospital in Maryland. A few months in, Maja received her first artificial leg. Because there was so little bone left, the prosthesis was hard to fit, and with her right leg also damaged, walking was intensely painful. Nonetheless, she managed to graduate from a local high school. At 18, she left the hospital and moved into an apartment with a fellow refugee. 15
- 4 Her parents finally joined her in Maryland, but Maja was already fiercely independent. After receiving a degree in psychology at a local university, she moved to Miami, landing a job at an insurance firm and eventually launching her own website development company. After dozens of surgeries, she was able to play the occasional round of golf or set of tennis. But she still hobbled on an imperfect prosthesis, and each activity left her in agony for days. 20
- 5 To unwind, she would watch the dolphins play at Clearwater Marine Aquarium, near her home in Palm Harbour. A young dolphin, Winter, who had lost her tail in a crab trap, caught Maja's eye: "She swam more like a shrimp than a dolphin. I identified with her." 25
- 6 After one doctor's visit, Maja showed up at the aquarium feeling depressed. Trainers were fitting Winter with a high-tech tail—a flexible steel joint covered in silicone plastic, with a gel lining designed to protect a dolphin's delicate skin. When they were done, Winter streaked off through the water. Maja was mesmerized. If she can do this, there's no way I can't, she thought. She approached the trainers who put her in touch with the inventors of the high-tech tail. Within ten days, she had a new leg. For the first time in almost 16 years, she was pain-free. 30 35

7 After eight months, her parents accompanied her to the aquarium. "After being in a war zone, this should be a piece of cake," Maja said as she lowered herself into the tank. She held out a hand to Winter, who approached cautiously, then glided away. After a few minutes, the dolphin let Maja stroke her back. Finally, Winter nuzzled up to her shoulder. Then the two embarked on an hour-long swim around the pool. 40

8 Her mother began to cry. "When Maja says she is going to do something, she always does it," she said. When Maja climbed out, her parents embraced her. She would have shouted with joy had she not been aware of dolphins' sensitivity to noise. Instead she quietly said, "I feel like I owed somebody something, and now I've paid my debt." Out in the parking lot, she got into her car and screamed at the top of her voice. 45

Read the following poem and answer the questions that follow.

Sonnet 18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
 Thou art more lovely and more temperate.
 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
 And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
 Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
 And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
 And every fair from fair sometimes declines,
 By chance or nature's changing course untrimm'd;
 But thy eternal summer shall not fade
 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st;
 Nor shall Death brag thou wand'rest in his shade,
 When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st.
 So long as men can breathe or eyes can see,
 So long lives this and this gives life to thee.

William Shakespeare

33 Read the extract from the short story 'Looking for The Rain God' below and answer the questions that follow.

The land was ready and ploughed, waiting for the crops. At night, the earth was alive with insects singing and rustling about for food. But suddenly, by mid-November, the rain-clouds fled away and left the sky bare. The sun danced dizzily in the sky with a strange cruelty. Each day the land was covered in a haze of mist and the sun sucked up the last drop of moisture out of earth. The family sat down in despair, waiting and waiting.

(a) What happened after the sun set?
