Questions 26 - 31 are based on the following passage.

The following passage describes a woman's experience on a cruise ship that was sinking in Antarctica. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

- 1 Adventurous Lisa Paisola, a real estate investor, lived to travel. She and her aunt had taken cruises to six different continents. The women paid $16,000 each for the 19-day Antarctica trip on a cruise ship, Explorer, that would take them to the bottom of the world. They settled into life on board, taking wildlife tours led by seasoned experts to surrounding islands and enjoying the unspoilt frozen landscape. 5

- 2 After twelve days at sea, Paisola and her aunt were getting ready for bed in their cosy cabin when they felt a sharp jolt. Minutes later, at around midnight, an alarm sounded and the Explorer's captain, Bengt White, made a shrill announcement over the intercom: "This is not a drill. Get on your arctic gear and come immediately to the muster station!" Paisola began to tremble. Hearing that alarm, she just knew that she was going to die. 10

- 3 Paisola pulled on her polar gear and rushed to the lounge. Seeing a few passengers still in their pyjamas, she dashed back to her cabin to collect a large bag of winterwear. She brought extra as she did not like to be cold. She set the bag of long underwear, gloves and socks in the middle of the room so anybody who needed them could take them. The captain quickly explained the ship had hit submerged ice and sustained a fist-size tear. Several crew members were trying to fix the leak but flood-control efforts did not appear to be working. Water was seeping through the toilets, a sign the ship was going down. 15

- 4 Using the lounge computer, Paisola dashed off e-mails to family members, saying she loved them and attaching a rough copy of her will. Everybody was sitting in the lounge in shock. None came forward when she offered them her e-mail account. They could not believe they were sinking. 20

- 5 White announced he had put out a distress call and three ships in the area had offered help, but the closest was six hours away. A little while after 2 a.m., with the ship listing dramatically, he came over the intercom once more. "Abandon ship!" he repeated three times. The passengers would have to ride out the night in lifeboats. Linking arms, Paisola and her aunt made their way to the now steeply pitched deck. The crew members hurriedly assembled rescue equipment. Paisola had to believe that they would survive. To break the tension, a couple broke out in the song 'Always Look on the Bright Side of Life.' 25 30

- 6 With thirty-one people, including two crew members, Paisola squeezed into lifeboat No. 3. Her small craft swung away from the ship. She held her breath, hoping they would not tumble out. Seconds later, the boat dropped into the sea. The winds made navigating impossible and with no engine, they were at the mercy of the waves. The boat grew quiet and seasickness took hold. They drifted in the cold. Paisola raised spirits when she rolled out a yellow rain poncho. Her shipmates had teasingly 35 called her Superman for wearing the billowing cape on excursions to view penguins and seals. But in the lifeboat, as many as a dozen passengers found protection under the enormous raincoat.

40

7 Two crew members approaching in an inflatable raft. The pair tossed over a rope so they could tow the disabled lifeboat behind them. Shortly before dawn, a helicopter believed to have been sent from the nearby military base, buzzed overhead. As the lifeboaters waved and shouted, Paisola turned to her aunt and said, "Finally, somebody else on the planet knows that we're out here. I was making every deal with God you can imagine."

32 Read the following poem of There's Been a Death in the Opposite House and answer the questions that follow.

There's been a death in the opposite house
 As lately as today,
 I know it by the numb look
 Such houses have always

The neighbors rustle in and out,
 The doctor drives away.
 A window opens like a pod,
 Abrupt, mechanically;

Somebody flings a mattress out, –
 The children hurry by;
 They wonder if It died on that, –
 I used to when a boy.

The minister goes stiffly in
 As if the house were his,
 And he owned all the mourners now,
 And little boys besides;

And then the milliner, and the man
 Of the appalling trade,
 To take the measure of the house.
 There'll be that dark parade

Of tassels and of coaches soon;
 It's easy as a sign, –
 The intuition of the news
 In just a country town.

Emily Dickinson

33 Read the extract from the short story Looking for a Rain God below and answer the questions that follow.

Throughout that terrible summer, the story of the children hung like a dark cloud of sorrow over the village and the sorrow was not assuaged when the old man and Ramadi were sentenced to death for ritual murder. All they had on the statute books was that the tribal murder was against the law and must be stamped out with the death penalty. The subtle story of strain and starvation and breakdown was inadmissible evidence at court; but all the people who lived off crops knew in their hearts that only a hair's breadth had saved them from sharing a fate similar to that of the Mokgobja family. They could have killed something to make the rain fall.

(a) Why were Ramadi and his father sentenced to death?

..... [1 mark]

(b) What was stated in the statute books?

(c) What does the word they in line 8 refer to?
